

Community on hand for opening of new Stuarts Draft library

By Matthew Fultz | Posted: Sat 9:35 PM, Oct 28, 2017

STUARTS DRAFT, Va. (WHSV) -- Literary fanatics have a new place to check out a book in Augusta County.

Leaders and members of the Stuarts Draft community gathered on Saturday at the opening of a new library in Broadmoor Plaza.

The space features study rooms, meeting areas, computers and books for both kids and adults.

People who came out to the grand opening said the library is much needed addition.

"This will be very convenient for our students to have a community library to check out books and the convenience of being close by and not having to travel to Deerfield, Fishersville, Staunton and Waynesboro, said Nancy Rader, a teacher at Stuarts Draft Middle School.

The library, a part of the Augusta County Library system, will be open three days a week.

Get the latest updates from whsv.com delivered to your browser

SUBSCRIBE TO PUSH NOTIFICATIONS

Gov. Northam announces reopening of Virginia Beach, new taskforce on school plans

READ MORE >>